

GROUNDBREAKING!

Woodside digs deep for Perth's mountain bike trails

The great outdoors, first-rate company, and an exciting adventure sport theme: it was all in a day's work for Woodside's Drilling and Completions Team, who spent their recent team volunteering day in Perth's rolling hills, developing and protecting bike trails with the Kalamunda Mountain Bike Collective (KMBC).

KMBC, a not-for-profit organisation, is Kalamunda's mountain bike trail network custodian, aiming to provide sustainable, environmentally-sensitive trails of international standards.

Sensational stats!

100% of the team felt:

 Improved teamwork and communication between colleagues

 A sense of wellbeing / happiness

 Pride in their company / their job

 More inclined to recommend volunteering to a colleague

Your day in quotes:

"Bit of social chat among peers, working towards a great cause."

"A change of scenery, good to be outdoors."

"Shared a laugh, good teamwork."

"Team work, change of mindset, nature experience."

"Camaraderie!"

The team's day began with an early morning team-building ride, which set the theme for the day, before they settled down, ready to work hard.

Following some big rains in the area, the pathways were muddy and full of puddles - very helpful for the group, as they worked to find and rectify track areas that needed better drainage. The outcome of this not only helps prevent safety issues for the path users, but also limits natural erosion of the tracks themselves.

Massive kudos go out to the 12-person strong team, as creating these drainage systems purely by hand (with no machinery) is not easy!

So thank you to Woodside Drilling and Completions Team for doing such a great job. Your hard work has gone towards ensuring Kalamuda's amazing trails can be used for many more years into the future.
